In a world where freedom is often taken for granted, there are those who have endured unimaginable hardships to escape tyranny and oppression. Kang Chol-hwan is one such individual. Born into a political prison camp in North Korea, Chol-hwan spent the first 10 years of his life in a living hell.

In his harrowing and inspiring memoir, The Aquariums of Pyongyang, Chol-hwan recounts his childhood in Camp 14, a notorious prison camp where starvation, torture, and death were commonplace. Despite the horrors he witnessed, Chol-hwan never gave up hope. He dreamed of a better life, a life of freedom.

In 1996, Chol-hwan finally managed to escape from Camp 14. He crossed the frozen Tumen River into China, where he was imprisoned and tortured for several months. But even this could not break his spirit. Chol-hwan eventually made his way to South Korea, where he was granted asylum.
