By John Doe

John Doe has been running for as long as he can remember. As a child, he would race his friends around the block. In high school, he joined the track team and ran the mile and two-mile. In college, he continued to run, competing in cross-country and track.

After college, John continued to run for fun and fitness. He ran his first marathon in his early 30s, and he has since run dozens more. He has also run several ultramarathons, including the Leadville 100-mile Trail Run.

In his book, Racing The Clock, John shares his experiences as a runner. He writes about the joy of running, the challenges of running, and the lessons he has learned from running.

Racing The Clock is an inspiring and entertaining memoir that will resonate with runners of all levels and anyone who has ever chased a dream. John's story is a reminder that it is never too late to set a goal and go for it.

Reviews

"Racing The Clock is a beautifully written and inspiring memoir. John Doe's passion for running is contagious, and his story will make you want to lace up your shoes and hit the pavement." - Dean Karnazes, ultramarathoner and author of Ultramarathon Man

"John Doe is a gifted storyteller, and Racing The Clock is a must-read for anyone who loves running or who has ever dreamed of achieving something great." - Jeff Galloway, Olympic runner and author of Galloway's Book on Running

"Racing The Clock is a celebration of the human spirit. John Doe's story is a reminder that anything is possible if you set your mind to it." - Sally McRae, marathoner and author of Running: A Love Story
