So he quit his job and started his own company, Enron Energy Services. His goal was to use his financial expertise to help companies reduce their energy costs. At the time, the oil industry was dominated by a few large companies that controlled the price of oil.

Batchelor knew that he could not compete with these giants head-on. So he came up with a different strategy. He focused on helping small and medium-sized businesses reduce their energy costs. He developed a software program that helped businesses track their energy usage and identify areas where they could save money.

Batchelor's software was a huge success. It helped businesses save millions of dollars on their energy bills. And as the word spread about Batchelor's company, he began to attract the attention of the oil industry.

The oil companies were not happy with Batchelor's success. They saw him as a threat to their monopoly on the oil industry. So they started to attack him. They spread rumors about him and his company. They tried to block his access to financing.

But Batchelor refused to give up. He continued to grow his business and help businesses save money on their energy bills. And eventually, he began to win over some of the oil companies.

In 2006, Batchelor sold his company to a large oil company for $1 billion. He used the money to start a new foundation, the Batchelor Foundation, which is dedicated to helping businesses reduce their energy costs.

Batchelor's story is an inspiring example of how one person can make a difference in the world. He took on a powerful industry and won. And he did it by using his financial expertise to help businesses save money and reduce their environmental impact.
