I have always been a Dubai kid, born and bred here; this is home. I have done all my education in Dubai and I feel that being a homegrown kid, I am able to interact with people from all backgrounds, cultures and nationalities very well.

As a person, I like keeping busy and having different things to do at the same time. I currently hold an internship in a fast growing food product company and at times my job becomes demanding, but I like to do other things for myself on the side.

I am a part of a food blog with a very close friend of mine and I have my own photography page which started because of my passion for photography. I also work with an online magazine part time and cover events for them and sometimes even write advice and survival articles.

I think of myself as a person who likes to do everything and I have found that if I put effort into it, I can build interest in a lot of different fields. I studied accounting during high school because the concept interested me and I decided to take it up as my major during university. During the course of my studies, I realised that I have a passion for writing and joined the writing tutors team to help guide peers with their writing assignments. I also developed an interest in events and marketing and tried to take that up on the side with the university newspaper and during my first internship I made the change from accounting to marketing as my field of interest.

I would like people to think of me as a good team player because I am very easy going and understanding. I have worked in groups for group projects with students during my undergraduate studies and have worked well with my team members.

I am eager to learn and good with application projects because I feel that I can create something visible and make a visible difference. I enjoy the field of marketing for the same purposes, because when I look at something I designed or created, it makes me happy.

DENTAL SCHOOL LETTER OF RECOMMENDATION

I am very pleased to write this letter of recommendation for Aisha Gump. This serves as part of her application for dental school. As Aisha's instructor for Math 212(Set Theory), I have observed that she is a hardworking and conscientious student. This course was not a requirement for her course, but she simply took it out of because she was intellectually interested with it. He also approached this subject with the very same level of determination and curiosity that he usually applies with her major courses, including medicine and Biology.

Aisha's work on exams and problem sets has demonstrated extra careful attention to different details. He was also willing and able to articulate all of her questions regarding abstract notions surrounding set theory, which is a real asset for several of her classmates, as well as the dynamic of the class as a whole. She is one who is very likeable, and still be able to freely express her personal thoughts and opinions about certain matters which may not really be agreeable by everybody.

Aisha is a very personable young lady who also seems as equally comfortable in association with her peers, as well as the school faculty. She has discussed with me all of her plans, especially the one about eventually becoming a dentist, and I have really enjoyed seeing the passion in her eyes, as well as the enthusiasm that is obvious in her as an undergraduate discussing about a professional career in life.

Her commitment to her craft, as well as her hard work in overall pursuing her goals will definitely serve her well in dental school. Please contact me if you have questions about her application. I would be willing to give my support and my time as well.

Sincerely,
Kelly Myers, Ph.D
