From Humble Beginnings to the Call of Faith

Born Jorge Mario Bergoglio on December 17, 1936, in Buenos Aires, Argentina, Pope Francis's early life was marked by simplicity and a deep-seated faith. Growing up in a working-class family, he witnessed firsthand the struggles of the poor and the marginalized.

As a young man, Bergoglio felt a calling to serve God and entered the Society of Jesus, a Catholic religious order dedicated to education and social justice. Ordained as a priest in 1969, he spent the next three decades ministering to the poor and marginalized in Argentina.

A Cardinal with a Conscience

In 1998, Bergoglio was appointed Archbishop of Buenos Aires, the capital of Argentina. As archbishop, he became known for his unwavering commitment to the poor and his outspoken advocacy for social justice.

His reputation for compassion and humility extended beyond the borders of Argentina, and in 2005, he was elevated to the College of Cardinals by Pope Benedict XVI. It was during this period that Bergoglio's name began to circulate as a potential successor to Pope Benedict.

A Pope for the People

In March 2013, the College of Cardinals elected Bergoglio as the 266th Pope of the Catholic Church. Taking the name Francis, he became the first pope from the Americas and the first Jesuit pope.

From the outset of his papacy, Pope Francis has emphasized the importance of humility, compassion, and service. He has made numerous visits to the poor and marginalized, including refugees, prisoners, and the sick.

Pope Francis has also been a vocal advocate for peace, social justice, and environmental protection. He has called for an end to war and violence, and for a more just and equitable distribution of wealth.
